Biographical / Historical

Ken Kesey (1935-2001) was born in La Junta, Colorado, to Edward and Dulce Kesey on September 17, 1935. Later he moved with his family to Springfield, Oregon. A champion wrestler in both high school and college, he eloped with his high school sweetheart, Faye Haxby, after they graduated from high school. They had three children: Jed, Zane, and Shannon. Kesey had another child, Sunshine, in 1966 with Carolyn Adams (also known as "Mountain Girl"). Kesey attended the University of Oregon's School of Journalism, where he received a degree in speech and communication in 1957. He was awarded a Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship in 1958 to enroll in the creative writing program at Stanford University, which he accepted the following year and where he studied under Wallace Stegner (1909-1993).

While at Stanford, Kesey volunteered to take part in a CIA-financed study named Project MKULTRA at the Menlo Park Veterans Hospital that focused on the effects of psychoactive drugs, particularly LSD, psilocybin, mescaline, and DMT. Kesey wrote many detailed accounts of his experiences with these drugs, both during the Project MKULTRA study and in the years of private experimentation that followed. His role as a medical guinea pig inspired Kesey to write "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" in 1962. Prior to this, Kesey had never done drugs.

The success of this book, as well as the sale of his residence at Stanford, allowed him to move to La Honda, California, in the mountains south of San Francisco. He frequently entertained friends and many others with parties he called "Acid Tests" that involved live music played by the band, The Warlocks (who later became known as The Grateful Dead), black lights, fluorescent paint, strobes, other "psychedelic" effects, and LSD.

In 1964, Ken Kesey took a trip from the West Coast to New York City to celebrate the publication of his book "Sometimes A Great Notion," and attend the World's Fair in New York City. He was joined by a group of men and women called The Merry Band of Pranksters, many of whom went by aliases: Carolyn Adams ("Mountain Girl"), Ken Babbs ("Intrepid Traveler"), John Babbs, Ron Bevirt ("Hassler"), John Page Browning ("Zea-Lot" or "Cadaverous Cowboy"), Jane Burton ("Generally Famished"), Kathy Casamo ("Stark Naked"), Neal Cassady ("Speed Limit"), Mike Hagan ("Mal Function"), Chuck Kesey ("Brother Charlie"), Dale Kesey ("Highly Charged"), Steve Lambrecht ("Zonker"), Margie Piaggio ("Marge the Barge"), Paula Sundstren ("Gretchen Fetchin"), and George Walker ("Hardly Visible"). In an International Harvester school bus covered in day-glo paint, Kesey and the Pranksters set out on a cross-country with Neal Cassady (1926-1968) at the wheel, a pitcher of orange juice spiked with LSD, amphetamines and marijuana. On this trip, Kesey intended to abandon writing, and make a new work in the medium of film from the bus footage they collectively shot.

Shortly after the bus trip, on April 23, 1965, the police arrested Kesey and charged him with possession of marijuana. He was arrested again for possession of marijuana the following year in 1966. In an attempt to mislead police and avoid prosecution, he faked his own suicide by leaving his car on a cliffside road with a suicide note that said, "Ocean, Ocean I'll beat you in the end." Kesey then fled to Mexico in the back of a friend's truck. He stayed in Mexico for nine months before returning to the United States, at which time he was arrested and sent to jail for five months.

Upon his release, he moved his family and members of the Pranksters to a farm in Pleasant Hill, Oregon, where he spent the rest of his life. Kesey suffered a mild stroke in 1997. Four years later, he died on November 10, 2001, following an operation for liver cancer at the age of 66.

The influence of Kesey's life and work has had a broad and indelible impact on American counter-culture. Author and journalist Tom Wolfe was one of the first commentators to identify Kesey as the essential link between the beatnik culture of the 1950s, and the hippy culture and psychedelics of the mid-to-late 1960s. Probably the most well-known retelling of Kesey and the Pranksters' exploits is Wolfe's "The Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test" (1968). However, Hunter S. Thompson documents the relationship between the Hell's Angels and the Merry Pranksters in his book, "Hell's Angels: The Strange and Terrible Saga of the Outlaw Motorcycle Gangs" (1966). Additionally, Allen Ginsberg's poem "First Party at Ken Kesey's with Hell's Angels" (1965) retells the infamous Acid Test where the Pranksters' introduced the Hell's Angel's to acid.

Scope and Contents

The bulk of the collection contains 16mm home movie footage shot during the Merry Pranksters 1964 cross-country road trip in a school bus painted with day-glo paint that they named "Further." After returning from the bus trip, Kesey and the Pranksters continued to shoot film on Kesey's La Honda ranch and at weekly parties that evolved into what became known as the "Acid Tests."

Footage that is not related to the 1964 bus trip includes the Pranksters at the 1969 Woodstock music festival, other acid tests throughout California, a film produced by the Pranksters called "Cassady in the Backhouse," an unfinished film "Atlantis Rising," and home movies of the Kesey family.

In addition to the film footage, there is also a significant amount of un-synced reel-to-reel audio tapes.

Publication Statement

UCLA Film and Television Archive

Processing Information

The "Ken Kesey collection of Merry Pranksters home movies and other materials" was processed and cataloged by Andrea Leigh at the UCLA Film and Television Archive between July 24, 2007-September 24, 2008. Cataloging revisions were made by Maratha Yee between March 10, 2009-October 9, 2009.

While completing her degree from UCLA's MLIS program from 2015 to 2017, Caitlin Denny repaired, digitized, and described roughly 200 reels of 16mm film and magnetic audio tape with the aid of Zane Kesey for the UCLA Film and Television Archive. HD access copies were made from these reels with the assistance of Dino Everett at the USC Hugh M. Hefner Moving Image Archive. Denny's feature film "Atlantis Risen," incorporates footage from the collection that she digitized during this time.

Existing catalog records and preservation notes were combined between 2018-2019 to create a series-level finding aid by the UCLA MLIS Media Archival Studies intern Brianna Toth under the supervision of UCLA FTVA's Head Cataloger Annette Doss. This finding aid was written in compliance with the Society of American Archivists' (SAA) "Describing Archives: A Content Standard (DACCS)" Second Edition and the "Guidelines for Efficient Archival Processing in the University of California Libraries" Version 3.2.

Original titles have been kept as they were originally spelled.

A significant portion of the footage remains to be transferred, new digital preservation masters need to be made, and curatorial work could still be done to enhance the research value of this collection. This collection would also benefit from an updated condition report. The archive hopes to pursue work on the collection in stages, as opportunities arise and funding permits.

A portion of the film elements that have been digitized are available upon request through the UCLA Library's Archive Research and Study Center (ARSC) for on-site researchers. These materials are listed in Series 5.

Collection Inventory

1. Ken Kesey and the Merry Pranksters, circa 1964-1977

Scope and Contents

The bulk of the collection is in Series 1, which contains footage shot during a cross-country road trip on the school bus Kesey and the Merry Pranksters named "Further." The approximate route of their bus trip is as follows: La Honda, CA; Los Angeles, CA; San Juan Capistrano, CA; Wikieup, AZ; Houston, TX; New Orleans, LA; Florida; New Jersey; New York, NY; Millbrook, NY; Ohio; Indiana; Illinois; Wisconsin; Minnesota; South Dakota; Calgary, Canada; Boise, ID; Oregon; Lake Tranquility, Canada.

After returning from the bus trip, Ken Kesey and Ken Babbs repeatedly edited over 45 hours of footage shot on the bus trip for many years. They would preview their progress at regular parties hosted at Kesey's ranch in La Honda. These parties evolved into what became known as the "Acid Tests," which incorporated live music performed by The Warlocks, who were later became known as the Grateful Dead. Although one of these versions of the film was shown at the Whitney Museum of American Art in 1975 under the title, "Intrepid Traveler and His Merry Band of Pranksters Search for a Cool Place, Part 1," it was never finished during Kesey's lifetime. Over the years Zane Kesey and other Pranksters have release pieces of the footage independently, but nothing in the form of a theatrical release as Kesey had originally imagined. After Kesey's death, all of the film the Pranksters shot remained on the Kesey property in Oregon, until it was entrusted to the UCLA Film and Television Archive by his son Zane Kesey in 2007.

Arrangement

This subseries is arranged alphabetically by title. For elements with the same title they were arranged chronologically.

1.1 Kesey and the Merry Pranksters' Bus Trip Film Elements, circa 1964-1966

Scope and Contents

Subseries 1.1 includes all of the footage from Kesey and the Prankster's infamous 1964 bus trip. It depicts the Pranksters painting the bus with day-glo paint at Kesey's home in La Honda, California in June 1964; their escapades driving across the country to New York; attending the World's Fair; and visiting Timothy Leary and Richard Alpert in Millbrook, New York. Other footage from this trip includes the Pranksters at Lake Tranquility in Canada, Yellowstone National Park, Hoover Dam, and the Oregon coast.

1.2 Kesey and the Merry Pranksters Film Elements, circa 1964-1977

Scope and Contents

Subseries 1.2 was shot on Kesey's La Honda ranch after the Pranksters returned from the cross-country bus trip. This footage documents the weekly parties at the ranch that evolved into what became known as the "Acid Tests." Some of the people who appear in footage include the Hells Angels, Owsley Stanley,

The Warlocks (later known as the Grateful Dead), and Allen Ginsberg. There is also footage of Further and the Pranksters at the 1969 Woodstock music festival, other acid tests they orchestrated throughout California, and a trip to Mexico.

Controlled Access Headings:

- Grateful Dead (Musical group)
- Stanley, Owsley, 1935-2011
- Garcia, Jerry, 1942-1995
- Woodstock Festival

1.3 Audio Elements

Scope and Contents

Subseries 1.3 consists of a significant amount of unsynced audio from the 1964 bus trip and afterward at Kesey's property in La Honda and at the Prankster's "Acid Tests." For the most part these elements have never been successfully married with the accompanying film footage, due to the Pranksters not being familiar with the recording equipment and being too high on acid to know when the battery was dying. As a result, these recordings are all at fluctuating and inconsistent speeds.

The filmmaker Alex Gibney and his production team attempted to synch the audio while making the documentary Magic Trip: Ken Kesey's Search for a Kool Place (2011), which features some of the digitally restored footage Nancy Mysel worked on at UCLA FTVA. Unfortunately, despite their efforts, very little of the audio was successful synched to the picture elements.

2. Atlantis Rising, circa 1969-1970

Scope and Contents

Series 2 consists of film and audio elements for an unfinished film "Atlantis Rising," which was derived from a play by Joe Lysowski about children rising from the city of Atlantis to spread the message of love. It was originally performed in London at the experimental theater Arts Lab where Kesey saw it in 1969. The play was reproduced with Lysowski in Regents Park shortly thereafter. Later, Kesey flew Lysowski to California so they could reenact the play and film it in 1970. The reenactment was shot on the beach of Año Nuevo on the property of Merrill Bickford on Easter weekend and funded by Max Raab.

Arrangement

This subseries is arranged alphabetically by title. For elements with the same title they were arranged chronologically.

Controlled Access Headings:

- Atlantis (Legendary place)
- Año Nuevo Island (Calif.)
- Regent's Park (London, England)
- Abicair, Shirley

2.1 Film Elements

General

Subseries 2.2 has a considerable amount of material that was shot on color Eastman stock that has faded to magenta. This material also suffers from vinegar and mold.

Scope and Contents

The majority of film elements for "Atlantis Rising" were shot on the beach of Año Nuevo, CA. Before the shoot begins an Easter egg hunt takes place. Pranksters and children can also be seen making costumes, applying makeup, and decorating tents with day-glo paint. Ken Babbs reads from the Tibetan Book of the Dead and throws the I Ching, while Joe Lysowski appears as King Neptune. Other people that appear are the set photographer Jerry DeWilde and musician Shirley Abicair—who sings and plays the zither. Footage also includes Ken Kesey and Joe Lysowski at Stonehenge in England. While in London, Kesey attends Blind Faith's first show ever at Hyde Park, which is also captured in the footage.
